The Greenland Shark. The Greenland shark is well known as a fee to whaters. It will follow a dead whale to the ship and show no fear of the men while they are engaged in cutting up the prey, biting out lumps from it as big as a man's head. Sometimes it happens that a man will fall off the slippery side of the whale close by the shark, but the latter never attacks him, being intent upon gorging itself with the flesh of the cetacean. The most severe wounds from thrusts of the whalers' knives will not persuade it to desist. This specles of shark is often partly or wholly blinded by a parasitic worm three inches long which fastens itself at the corner of the eye and lives on its fluids.

How Savages Came to Use Knives. The first men, armed with the simplest weapons or with none at all, pursued in the chase the animals that served them as food and, being generally in a state of starvation, tore them to pieces with their fingers and devoured on the spot the fiesh, raw and various air tight joints and sockets bloody. In time they domesticated animais that assisted them in hunting and invented the bow and spear that enabled them to kill their prey at a greater distance. The knife was invented as an instrument of attack or defense or for rough cutting and carv-S. Crotty was chaperon.
